

RITE NOW @ ROP

Spring is graduation season, and the time of year when students start to create plans for their future. With over 32 high school diplomas and GEDs awarded by Sierra Ridge Academy (SRA) this past year, the program is helping its students to dream big dreams, and construct academic and professional futures which include post-secondary education, trade school or a career.

This month, SRA students who were selected for their academic achievements were given an opportunity to attend the 8th annual “SAYS” (Sacramento Area Youth Speaks) Summit College Day. Held at the University of California, Davis campus, the Summit College Day gave attendees a “glimpse” of college life and encouraged them to pursue post-secondary education goals. Thousands of California high school students toured the UC Davis campus, listened to a keynote address and participated in numerous hands-on workshops and presentations that focused on self-expression and leadership.

SAYS provides youth from diverse backgrounds with opportunities to enhance their education through unique programming. For SRA students, this “glimpse” of college life was meant to inform and inspire them about the many opportunities their futures hold, reinforcing their graduation plans with the belief that if you can see it, you can achieve it.
